

What is a Load Equivalence Number (LEN)?

A Load Equivalence Number or LEN is a whole number used to express the amount of current that is drawn from an NMEA 2000 network. One LEN is equal to 50mA. If a device draws 151mA of current from the network, then its LEN is 4. Note that the LEN is always rounded up to the next whole number.

Online URL:

<https://www.maretron.com/wp-content/phpkbv96/article.php?id=464>